Call for Fellowship Applicants

Legal Action Chicago is interested in hosting one or more post-graduate fellows beginning in 2022, including fellows supported by the Skadden Fellowship Program.¹

About Legal Action Chicago

Legal Action Chicago is a newly-created subsidiary of Legal Aid Chicago, the Midwest’s largest provider of free civil legal services to people who are living in poverty or otherwise vulnerable. Because we are not bound by the restrictions that prohibit Legal Aid Chicago from litigating class actions and pursuing legislative initiatives, we use these tools and other forms of community-based policy advocacy to effect systemic changes that help many people as opposed to a single individual. We also work closely with community groups to identify the most pressing issues affecting low-income families, with a special focus on racial equity.

Legal Action Chicago is a tight-knit organization with a small but experienced staff. Our Director was formerly the President of the Shriver Center on Poverty Law, our supervising attorney has more than 30 years’ experience at Legal Aid Chicago, and our staff attorney clerked for two federal appellate courts and has experience in both complex federal litigation and community-based policy initiatives.

Our work is not limited to a single issue area or advocacy method; for example, Legal Action Chicago has used a variety of litigation and policy advocacy tools to tackle issues ranging from harmful public housing rent policies to delays in the processing of unemployment insurance to the unnecessary hold-up of property transfers due to outstanding water bills. Our work spans the subject matter of all of Legal Aid Chicago’s practice groups (Housing, Consumer, Children & Families, Public Benefits, and Immigration & Workers’ Rights), and we welcome fellowship applicants who have cross-cutting interests and experiences.
